

Best Colors for Wedding Dresses

Selecting your wedding dress color is undoubtedly among the most baffling tasks on your wedding to-do list nowadays because it isn't you-must-do-it-this-way anymore!

For a long time, most people preferred white or ivory wedding dresses; however, more recently, other colors have also been boldly used in wedding dresses. From bold hues to white wedding dresses, there is a message that the couple, or rather the bride, is trying to convey to those present.

Through this blog, we hope to explain the meaning behind the different colors of various wedding dresses and recommend the best wedding dresses to you!

Top Trendy Traditional Colors

Have you recently started looking for your perfect wedding dress and have been slightly overwhelmed by the plethora of wedding colors? Well, you don't have to - we've rounded up some of our favorite traditional wedding colors so that you'll have no difficulty finding the gown of your dreams!

White Wedding Dresses

- Origin

A white wedding is a traditional formal attire that originated with Anne of Brittany on the occasion of her marriage to Louis XII of France; however, it became prevalent when Queen Victoria preferred white over the traditional blue wedding gown.

The white wedding style stepped up significantly when other European leaders followed suit. White wedding dresses are still considered the most influential and classic choice of all time.

- Meaning

Being considered the color of perfection, white signifies purity, innocence, virginity, and wealth.

Red Wedding Dresses

- Origin

China was the first country in which traditional brides used to wear a particular color. During the Zhou Dynasty, there have been imposed national laws and rules, together with the compulsion to wear traditional black robes with a red trim, known as qipao, for brides and grooms. Red wedding dresses are now a part of traditional weddings in many cultures.

- Meaning

Being a bold and alluring hue, red signifies passion, love, desire, and excitement - an ideal fit for you if you want to make a statement on your big day!

1. Off-the-Shoulder Satin Tea-Length Wedding Dress

Blue Wedding Dresses

- Origin

Because blue color symbolizes purity and divinity, blue was a popular choice for bridal attire before Queen Victoria wore a white gown on her wedding day; however, after that, white overtook blue as the traditional wedding dress color.

- Meaning

As blue color is reminiscent of natural elements like the sky and sea, blue wedding dresses symbolize peace, purity, serenity, and femininity.
